You say, 'This is the EQ interface for my Warrior - As you can see I have many colored macros across all of my hotbars. I use these on the main character I am playing as a way to help me memorize my keys'
You say, 'Most of my characters also don't have this much clutter -they don't have the third bulging hotbar ontop the other two large hot bars and they don't have their combat discs window open. All of those things are cluttering up the screen primarily since Warriors need so much interface space'
You say, 'You might also notice that my main hotbars (just below) are using NPAD1, NPAD2, this is because I primarily play with the Numpad; The numpad keys are broadcast to all my characters at all times while the other hotbar that's at the very bottom is specifically ONLY this character's keys'
You say, 'If you've just spent some time to read everything I have said here, hopefully you learned a little something! This isn't required to read, I put it here to fill my chat window with some extra information that may or may not be repeated in the guide itself'
