

Digital technologies confront users with the need to master a wide range of technological, cognitive and social competencies—collectively termed “Digital Literacy”.

