

The Promise of Public Schools

Public schools are committed to inspiring social mobility and are the source of hope, well-being, and productivity. They are the heart of any society committed to dynamic civic engagement. They prepare the next generation of citizens and leaders for global awareness, global competition, and global problem-solving. In service to all regardless of heritage and circumstance, the success of public schools is the foundation and promise of social peace and prosperity.

-Teaneck Board of Education

