

Program Management

Program Management is where a number of individual projects are brought together in an umbrella. This grouping occurs because the projects are linked through a common governing strategic objective. By creating a joint program to manage multiple projects, easier and more effective oversight is achieved, improved teamwork results, and stakeholders have greater transparency across the program as a whole.