Spreadsheets can be helpful for storing and analyzing data in a tabular format in rows and columns. A No Code Database, like Knack is often a better choice when you require multiple tables/sheets with defined relationships to handle complex data models and workflows.

The image shows three devices displaying the Knack interface. The laptop screen displays a dashboard with a line chart titled 'ACME sales by region' showing sales over time for North America, South America, Europe, and Asia. It also includes a pie chart showing the regional distribution of sales and a table with columns for Product, Month, Price, Sales, and Region. The tablet and smartphone show similar views of the dashboard, demonstrating the responsive design of the Knack application.
