After the longest period in history without an increase, the federal minimum wage today is worth 17% less than 10 years ago—and 31% less than in 1968.

Real value of the minimum wage (adjusted for inflation)

