

Philosophy consists of many different elements: differing definitions, a complex origin with founding ideas, a wide scope and application, and a value and purpose in the world that we live in today; however, all of these pieces meld together to show that philosophy is all about human thought.

At the most basic level, philosophy can be defined in different ways. "Dictionary.com" defines philosophy as "the rational investigation of the truths and principles of being, knowledge, or conduct." This definition implies that philosophy is a process of finding the truth, increasing knowledge. Another definition by "Dictionary.com" is "a particular system of thought based on such study or investigation: the philosophy of Spinoza", which means that philosophy is a set of ideas of a specific group or individual. One last meaning of philosophy is "the critical study of the basic principles and concepts of a particular branch of knowledge, especially with a view to improving or reconstituting them: the philosophy of science." This definition signifies that philosophy is a way of viewing ideas, one should be surprised, curious, and reasonable when exploring new ideas, as well as looking to evolve them for the better.

Even though the word "philosophy" can mean different things, they all revolve around human thought.
