Interactive Notebook:

On Tuesdays and Thursdays children begin to build and add to their interactive notebook. You will need to decide which method will work the best for your setup.

Keep it all in your R.E.A.D. Binder

If you want to keep everything contained in your R.E.A.D. Binder, you can create a section for Language Arts and add blank cardstock paper. The cardstock will help with durability as your child repeatedly thumbs through the binder.

Use a Manilla File Folder as a Lapbook

Glue a few manilla file folders together to create a double or triple lapbook (there are many videos online depicting this process.) Keep the lapbook in the binder pockets or nearby for easy use.

Use a Composition Notebook

Composition notebooks are fantastic resources for interactive notebooks. They are inexpensive, have a sturdy cardboard front and back, and include lined paper for children to write in additional answers. Additionally, having a separate notebook provides children with a Language Arts reference tool they can continue to build on during the next few years of schooling.

Recommended Method

As children will be adding to this notebook twice a week, whichever you choose, be sure that and keep this interactive notebook as children will be adding to it twice a week. Topics in the notebook will help meet Kindergarten language arts and are outlined in the weekly schedule above.

Assessment Activities

All collection of helpful resources you can use to assess your child's readiness to begin our curriculum. Sit down with your child and review each letter name in both uppercase and lowercase.
