BOBCAT, CHUKAR PARTRIDGE AND PEREGRINE FALCON

In trying to get a meal, the bobcat may make one available to the peregrine falcon that feeds mostly on medium sized birds. These chukar partridges that have escaped the bobcat are not native to the U.S. They were introduced from the Middle East and are established in parts of the American West. Bobcats and peregrines get along well in the habitats favored by chukars.
