

Macha, check this post:

He said, "I want to be able to drink my own beer - to be able to take a drink at my own pace, when I want to take a sip out of my beer and to not have to ask somebody to give it to me. I really miss that independence." Erik Sorto is the first person in the world to have a neuro-prosthetic device implanted in his brain. Just by his thoughts he can literally move his hand well enough for drinking a beer or even giving a proper handshake.

Read more at <http://devicebar.com/2015/05/robotic-arm-solely-controlled-by-his-mind-2767/>