These findings have important implications for the design of the training program. First, the results suggest that the training program should focus on improving the participants' knowledge of the correct use of the equipment. This can be achieved by providing detailed instructions and demonstrations of the correct technique. Second, the results suggest that the training program should focus on improving the participants' physical fitness. This can be achieved by providing a structured exercise program that targets the muscles used in the task. Finally, the results suggest that the training program should focus on improving the participants' mental skills. This can be achieved by providing mental training exercises that help the participants to develop a positive mindset and to manage their stress.
