

In 2015, I couldn't find a calendar like the one you're holding. As someone with low-vision, I needed something with these special qualities: high contrast with large black letters and numbers, extra-large daily writing space and a black page border that would prevent me from writing off the page. I looked all over, but couldn't find anything even close.

Friends who saw the prototype I made and was using, urged me to start making and selling it. I liked the idea of helping others in my situation. Obviously, I gave in and you're holding what is now the latest edition.

If this product will help you or someone you know,
I'm happy we've met.
