

Name: _____

Let's write about some things that are out of this world. Did you ever think that the full moon might actually be full of something like cheese or gumballs? Write a few lines about what the full moon might have inside it:

[illegible]

Saturn's ring
you can ima

This image shows a blank sheet of white paper with horizontal blue or grey ruling lines. The lines are evenly spaced and run across the width of the page. In the top left corner, there is a small portion of a black object, possibly a pen or pencil, which is partially cut off by the edge of the frame. The rest of the page is empty and ready for writing.

Name: _____

Goal: Support only one side of an argument

People often tell "little white lies" in order to avoid being put in a situation they'd rather avoid. Do you think "white lies" are acceptable? Or do you think a lie is a lie and telling a lie of any sort is wrong? Write an editorial for your local newspaper convincing others to agree with your opinion. To help you think about the issue, answer the questions below.

1. Why is telling a lie wrong?
2. What harm befalls others when you tell a lie?
3. When is it appropriate to avoid telling the truth? Is there ever a "good" time to avoid the truth?
4. What good, if any, can come from telling the truth all the time?

Convince others to agree with your opinion.

This image shows a single sheet of white paper with horizontal ruling lines. The lines are evenly spaced and run across the width of the page. There are no margins, text, or other markings on the paper.